Alisa Conner: 00:27 Hello. Hello. Welcome to the Feed U Podcast. I'm Alisa Conner and I'm your host and I just want to take a minute and thank you for tuning in again this week. I know you have options for your podcasts listening in. I appreciate you being here this week. I, you know, we are smack in the middle of the summer. It W it is as I'm recording this, I'm the solstice just passed and I don't know about you, but I often get distracted during the summer and I'm, I have like all of my kids are home and so that's distracting. And then you know, the sun is shining and it's nice out and the pool is calling and all these different fun things. So if you're anything like me, um, you get busy and one of the first things to start suffering is your customer service. And so I thought it would be great to come on and talk a little bit about customer service and getting a p a plan together and actions in place so that when you do get busy this time of year maybe, um, I, the holidays is another time of year that people get really busy. For me back to school is really busy and then there's just times in your business where you're really busy. But if you have plans and procedures in place for taking care of your customers, number one, it's going to help you stand out from your competitors. And number two, your customers are going to feel taken care of and they're going to refer you and come back to you to work with you again. And again. So this episode of the [inaudible] podcast, we are at episode number 44 is all about how to make customer service your secret weapon. But before we get started, a word from our sponsor.

Announcer: 01:59 One of the biggest frustrations I hear from business owners on a regular basis is I need more clients. And I get it. Every business struggles with getting new clients. Until you know how to do it. The problem is is you spend your time networking and going to events and making phone calls that don't go anywhere. You're out trying to attract people to you when there is a much easier way. Growing your email list is so important because it fills your list with potential clients who actually want to hear from you and it gives you the ability to reach out to them on a regular basis and share what you have to offer. To grow your email list, you got to have a great free download. Sign up for our free newsletter isn't working anymore. You've got to create a download that peaks their interest, gets them to take action and adds them to your list. Sounds easy, right? Of course. It's not easy. That's exactly why I created my new free training. To help you create an awesome free download, you can sign up at Alisaconner.com/createmyfreebie. This live training is going to present the five easy steps that I've used with my clients to help them go from hot mass marketing to growing an email list that they consistently get sales from. So you don't want to miss this training. Head on over to Alisaconner.com/createmyfreebie and sign up today. I'll see you inside.

So let's jump right in on customer service. And I always think it's, um, a great way to start our conversation by either talking about a poor customer service experience or um, a awesome customer service experience. And I've had both, um, recently we have a pretty new restaurant here in um, Arvada where I live. That just opened up. I know, well, you know, it's been open probably about a year, but they just, um, they started serving breakfast and on a recommendation of a few friends. I stopped in and um, their customer service was impeccable. They greeted you at the door, they had a smile and it was so refreshing because a lot of times, you know, we will go and you, you never see the waiter again. You never get a refill on your coffee. Um, they don't give you any eye contact. They don't want to make conversation and whatever they're doing over there, um, at the Butchery, they're doing a great job. So a shout out to the butchery. If you're listening and you guys are doing a great job and I wish you could take a few other places under your wing and teach them to do customer service. Now on the other hand, I think that we are also in a, in a world where a lot of things have been automated and so that has made customer service representatives like people that are doing sales and people that are waitresses and waiters and even fast food, restaurant, um, workers lazy, honestly, um, in the world of customer service, not necessarily as people, but just they don't have to deliver the customer service that previous generations did. And I think it's a big problem, um, because it's, it's allowing people to avoid conversation. And as human beings, we have to have conversation. Um, it's one of the things that we need in our daily lives is to be able to have human interaction with each other in order to remain healthy and sane and, um, connected to one another. So one of the big differentiators you can have in your business is to offer exceptional customer service. And I don't know what that looks like for you, but I'm, I'm in the process and I have been in the process of really refining what I do for my clients. And an example, um, of of something that I did, I'm going to give to you in just a minute. I kind of, I'm going to back up for just a second cause I want to talk to you a little bit about the direction we're going and I have one, two, three, four, five, six, seven different tools or ideas to throw out at you to help you improve your customer service or get it set up. If you don't have a system set up already, this is a perfect opportunity for you to set up your system so that whether you're implementing it or you have a new team member or a virtual assistant or somebody they know what each client, um, how they will be treated and the process that they will go through with your company. As far as customer service. Now, one of my mentors and one of the people that I learned from has excellent customer service and just these little tiny things that you wouldn't think make a big deal totally, um, will uplift you in the eyes of your customer. So I'm going to give you an example of um, what he did when I joined one of his programs and then an example of something that I did. Now, um, my first recommendation recommendation to you is to personalize your interactions with your customers. We live in a very automated world. I'm sure you get in the mail just like I do. All of those letters that are like resident or they spell your name wrong or they put your, um, husband's first name and your last, you know, your, uh, first name is the last name. And you know, the, there's no personalization. They're just throwing it out there and hoping something sticks. Well, when you can personalize your interactions with your customers, they are going to remember you and they're going to refer you. And so let's back up to um, James James. I joined what a James is programs in October and about a week after I joined, um, I got in the mail, a personalized card thanking me for joining his program. This is an online training program and with it were two packs of brownies, which I couldn't eat but my kids loved. And um, just there was something else in that box, but I, that was boxed one. And so it was a thank you for joining my cores, here's her brownies, we're really excited and make sure you log in, Yada, Yada, Yada. And then, um, as the course progressed, I mean besides all of the other things that people do in their courses as far as offering, you know, a free Facebook group and you live coaching or whatever it is, this was above and beyond that. So then a couple of weeks later, I think it was about a month into the program because he wanted you to get in and do some stuff in the program. You, I've got another box in the mail and um, it contained, what did it have in it? Um, oh, it had these really cool quote cards that were there, kind of like a, um, you know, how you get like the angel cards and all that stuff. But they were personalized to him and um, they came in a little black velvet bag and they were personalized by all of the things that he, his little nuggets of wisdom he had printed on like a deck of cards and put in this little bag. And then it came with a zip drive of some additional training and there's cash, there was something else in there. But again, a personalized card. But just these little extra things. And I was like, oh, I just really like that. And it wasn't like it was super expensive to do this. Um, so I, and inspired me to do for my clients. Last year I decided I wanted to do something personalized for them. So I have, um, different sets of clients, but I have clients that do consulting with me and they spend a pretty good amount of money with me. And so I decided most of my clients are females and they enjoy wine. So I decided to personalize wine. And so I found a company online and I, I can't remember what it is, but I'll find it and stick it in the show notes. Um, and you could personalize the wine label. So I went ahead and created those and I uploaded them with my logo and their logo and it said, um, something like to a great pairing. Thanks for a great 2018. And it was, you know, pairing like a wine pairing and every person. So then they got it in the mail and they had to sign for it because it was alcohol. And so I knew they were going to get it and I knew when they were going to get it and let me track it. And I had every single one of them reach out to me and go, oh my gosh, that was the best gift ever because it was different. They knew that I put thought into it and it was just one little like up level that I could do for them. So I want you to think about what that looks like in your business. Like, and maybe you don't have the budget to send, you know, personalized wine to people, but there are so many different ways that you can just reach out. Even if you just go to dollar tree and get thank you cards and hand write them, um, that is a great way to start their other business. Um, options out there. Send out cards is a great one. They have little gifts and cards that you can send. Um, and there's, there's a few others, but you know, just thinking about what does it look like you, you know, as soon as someone buys from you and they spend money with you, you know, if they're at your level one price offering, what is something that you can do extra to personalize their experience with you? And it may be as simple as uploading a personalized video that says, I am so, I'm so excited that you're part of my community, that you are going to join me on this journey. And if you ever have questions, please just reach out. However, the best way is for them to connect with you. It could be on Facebook, it could be on LinkedIn, it could be on messaging. Um, it could be an email, whatever it is. Um, and that is a great way just to go a little above and beyond without breaking the bank. So my tip number one is to personalize every interaction you can. And that is not only for onboarding, but, um, we, you know, I did an episode previously on email tagging and segmenting. And this is a great way to deliver personalized content in your email service provider to, uh, the people that you're wanting to do business with and the people you do business with. Meaning that if you have somebody that's reaching out to you and wanting to learn how to create, um, a chat bot that delivers, that, uh, that collects an email address because they want to start using chatbots in their sales funnel, for example, then you know, every piece of content that I can come up with that is, you know, around different growth tools for chatbots. I'm going to share that. Um, and it could be, you know, it could be that they're interested in, let's use, um, let's use a realtor for example. So I have a couple of clients that are realtors and let's say they're wanting to implement an email marketing campaign for their clients and they know that they have an interest in a certain neighborhood. Well, they could actually create a sales email sequence that is dedicated to people that have shown interest in that neighborhood and just deliver that to them versus, you know, all of the neighborhoods. In a certain city, they may not want all those neighborhoods. Um, so think about what that looks like as far as personalizing every communication as much as you can. It does take some time to set this up. I'm not going to lie to you, but it is going to help you stand out and, um, get you above and beyond what other people out there are doing or mostly the lazy marketers to be quite honest. Um, and then the other piece of that is you can actually analyze if it's working or not. So you're creating these different sequences and maybe it's just a broadcast email and you just see, you know, what is resonating with people, what are they clicking on, what are, um, what are the things that they're reading on your blog or reacting to for your content creation? And then you deliver more of that to those people. So think about that. How else can you personalize your relationship with your clients? So that's tip number one. Tip number two is, um, I referenced it, uh, previously when your, for your onboarding, but you can send personalized videos. So a lot of times with clients I create personalized videos because they need to know how to do certain things in ConvertKit or on their website. And so I wanted to give you a few tools that enable you to actually screen record, either with yourself in it, um, just the screen or just you or you can go back and forth. Um, and my favorite is loom like Allume that you would weave on l o m and I will link to these in the show notes just so you have them, but you can do all kinds of screen recordings. Then it automatically uploads to the loom, um, website and it gives you a link that you can copy and you can paste that into an email and just say, hey, I created this personalized video for you. Please take a look at it and it will let you know who and, um, who and when they watched that. So that's a really cool, um, tool that you can utilize. And it's, it's free. They do have a paid version. I don't think I have the paid right now, but it does give you the opportunity to do some personalized recording and screen recording, especially if you're trying to show or illustrate something or you're trying to do a tutorial for them. Or I'm just a quick little educational video. I use this previous, um, just recently in my five day opt in challenge challenge to reach out to people to make sure that they were going to show up for the

Webinar. And even though a lot of people didn't respond to the personalized video, like as far as in the training, I did have people reach out to me, um, via email and say, hey, that was really cool. I'm so grateful you sent this video. And I, I really learned a lot in the challenge and thanks so much for doing it. And so it did get noticed and it did stand out in their email. And um, so that's a way for you to get a little bit closer to your audience and deliver some things. So the other tool is boom, boom, oh, I'm sorry, boom, boom, BombBomb. That was pretty funny. Boom, boom. No, that's not it. I gotta cut that part out. So the other tool that you can use in it is not free. It doesn't have a 14 day free trial, but then you've got to pay, I think it starts at $49 a month, but it's just called BombBomb. So just be BombBomb and it lets you do the same things that loom can do but just a little bit more. There's just a little bit more you can do with it. So go check out both of those. But the other one that I use if you're not ready for either of those for loom or for BombBomb, is if you have g-mail, um, or if you have g suite and you use Gmail, any, any sort of Gmail, you have the option to add an extension called free video email for Gmail. And once you add it to chrome, um, you'll have a little video camera in your Gmail messages and it allows you to add a video to that email and uh, you'll see it right in there. So you'll record it and then it just automatically populates it into the email. And you can type a little message before, a little message after. And um, you can't edit the, the video at all, um, because it's just input into your email. But it's a great way they, you know, I take that back. They do have a few editing things, but you have to choose them before. Like, you can choose your zoom, you can choose, I think there's a couple of filters in there, but you have to choose all that before we record. So there's no post editing of the video and I don't believe there's a way to download it, but it's a great way for you to just reach out in a new and different way and add a video into your, your Gmail emails. And you know, that could just be a quick, hey, I was thinking about you. I have this 'em say such and such, um, program coming up or live event coming up. And I'd like to personally invite you if you'd like to join. I'm sticking the link in this email and I'd love to see you there. So, um, that is, you have to do it directly through Gmail. You can't do it through your email service provider. So that's kind of the difference is if sending personalized emails from your g-mail account, you could use this free video email for Gmail extension in your chrome. And if you're not on chrome yet, please go there. That's all I'm gonna say. I mean, Google chrome is the bomb, so if you're using something else, I don't, I can't help you go use loom I guess. So that's number two is to create personalized videos. And a lot of times we, uh, when we create those videos, it's all, we don't really know what to say.

And so asking questions or asking people to respond or ask them to, um, you know, hit reply on the email at the end of your video or however you want to do that. That is a great way to get some engagement. And the same goes for any kind of video that you're doing. Um, on social media. I always say ask questions, um, you know, ask people for their input and I'm trying to do that. Uh, you'll see in my Instagram stories and my Facebook stories is adding more ways for people to ask me questions and to do surveys and polls. So if you're not following me on Facebook or Instagram, come find me. I will add the links in the show notes and let's keep moving along. So number three, this is a biggie and this can be kind of hard as your business grows. And so I'm going to give you the opportunity to replace the word you in this sentence with somebody on your team, but make yourself available. And that means, you know, there's a lot of, um, ways to hide behind your computer when you have a business. And I'm going to challenge you to make yourself available to your audience and to the people that are customers, clients or potential clients in some way or another, whether that's them sending you, um, a direct message on Instagram or it's, you know, you're handing out your email address or you want to pick up a phone and have a conversation with people, but making yourself available to them so that if they have questions, um, or they, you know, they want to learn more or are they just, you know, they, they want to continue the relationship with you. You are making it easy for them to do that. And so some ways that you can do that is one to let them know how they can reach you. What's the best way to reach you, what's the best way for them to interact with you that you are actually going to respond. Now, a caveat to that is that I have, um, some other people that I have that I follow on social media that I have looked up to and they say, reach out to me on Instagram or direct message and then they don't respond. So please don't do that. Um, if you're going to tell people to connect with you on a specific platform or in a specific way, please remember that you need to respond to them. And so if you are so busy that you can't do that, then I'm going to highly recommend that you get somebody on your team or in your office to do that for you. It's really great if you can do it yourself because they're going to know if it's not, um, and the people that are doing this and they're doing it well, even if it takes them a little bit of time to get back to you, um, as long as you respond and you know, I would say anywhere between 48 and 72 hours. If you can just send them a response that's simple and easy, especially if you're directing them there to communicate with you. Just make sure that you're actually replying, you're actually communicating with them on that particular platform. And um, when, when can they reach you? Like what are the best time? So if you're gone, like if your weekend is a three day weekend and you're gone Friday, Saturday, Sunday, or you're only in the office, you know, Monday, Wednesday, Friday, just let them know, like, I may not get back to you on Tuesday because I don't, I'm not in the office that day. You know, I have whatever it is. I have client meetings, I have what I Dah, Dah, Dah, but I'll get back to you on Wednesday. Just let them know, um, where and when to connect with you. And then, um, another way to connect with people and to kind of remind them of when you're going to be online and answering questions or when you're going to do a Facebook live is by using a tool like be live or, um, there's another one that's not coming to my brain right now, but B live is one where you can actually schedule it and we'll send them a reminder in, you know, a Facebook. But if they have, if you've set up a messenger Bot, like in Facebook messenger, you can actually send them a little reminder that way and let them know, hey, I'm going live. This is what I'm talking about. I'd love to have you come on in and ask me your questions. Another way for you to connect, and it's this is this part of the sales funnel is all about you giving. Um, so you're not wanting to jump on there and sell them anything. You're just trying to build that relationship and give them the opportunity to get to know you and get to ask questions and get to build that know, like trust relationship with you. So, um, you know, if you're, if you're telling them to meet you somewhere, just make sure that you're showing up there and you're answering and that if you are delivering content or value that you making them aware of it. Cause I think a lot of times we create this really great content and then we don't tell anybody about it. And so just just remember to toot your own Horn a little bit and at least let people know that it's out there so that they can come and interact with you and ask questions. And if you want comments, tell them to comment. Um, and then the other thing, there's one more caveat in here is if you're on snapchat and none of your clients are on Snapchat, don't be on snapchat. You need to go find where they are because the likelihood that they're going to leave the platform that they're most comfortable to come and find you is really slim to none. You need to figure out, you know, who your client is, where they're hanging out, and then direct that, you know, either show up there and direct them to how they can communicate with you in that arena. Or for example, if your client base is on Instagram and you want to connect with them in a Facebook, you are driving that traffic from Instagram over to your Facebook group, but it's got to be a platform that they're comfortable with or that they, they use because if they're not using it, one that ever gonna find you in to, they're not going to interact with you. So there's a, just to recap those really quickly, let them know how to reach you when you're available. Um, promote, you know, the Times that you're available for Q and A's or by either doing polls or putting it out there in Messenger. Um, and then, you know, tell them the best way to connect with you. Like if you're doing a poll or a, um, the one that's coming to mind is in Facebook stories and Instagram stories. You can actually do a poll or I guess, no question. And just reach out to those people if they had answered that question because if they've answered it, they are interacting with you and you need to continue the conversation, even if it never goes anywhere. It's just good manners. So think about what that looks like and think about how you can implement that into your, into your business model. Um, the next recommendation I have for you is to add some sort of chats to your website. Now you can do this with a messenger Chat Bot, um, and through Facebook and you can actually have some things built out or you can just say, hey, we're not, we're only here these hours per day. But if you leave your message here, we'll get back to you on Facebook just as soon as we're back in the office. Or, you know, give them a timeframe. But it enables you to start the conversation with some ability for them to go and figure out, um, you know, a little bit more about the area of interest. So for me, like in my chat Bot, I have, do you want to learn about the podcast? Do you want to learn a little bit more about branding? Are you interested in sales funnels or do you want to come to my online training? Um, and then, you know, each of those, I have a little sequence built out that's like, hey, this is kind of, you know, the online training is happening this time, this and you can sign up here. Um, or if it's a podcast that links them over to the podcast page so it gets them started and then there's always the opportunity for them to ask a question from then on out. Um, like if they want to know, you know, when is so-and-so going to be featured on the podcast? They can pop that into messenger. And then when I see it, um, the next time that I'm on messenger, I will go on and answer and say, hey, thanks so much for reaching out, blah, blah, blah. Um, so I have a quote actually about, um, about customer purchasing and I forgot that I stuck this in here. So that was kind of out of nowhere. But, um, especially put chat on your website to go back a little bit if you are launching products and promoting products and launching so that if they have questions before they buy that a live person is actually answering those questions and let them know that like, we're going to be here to answer your questions because we want to make sure that you, um, are getting the answers you need so that you can make the right buying decision for you. And I'm, you may have to go to something a little bit more advanced than messenger to do that, but there, um, I have, uh, I don't have them written down here, but I do have, oh yes, I do. I take that back. Um, live chat for wordpress, you know, I'm a wordpress girl, so if you're using wordpress, you can actually get live chat for wordpress and it'll enable you to do live chat while I'm with your clients there. You can always, I mean you can add messenger, but I think if you're going through a launch or a product, um, sales or like if you, if you're selling products from your website, at some point you probably need to have live chat. If you're doing a big launch or promotion. Um, Zendesk is another one. And then, oh, lark. So I will link to all of those in the show notes and you can just choose which one is best for you. I am not at the point where I need to do live, um, web chat yet. And if I do, I'm going to actually bring in somebody else. When I get to that point, I'm going to bring somebody else in to do my life, um, question and answers. So when I get to that point in my business and it's coming quickly as I launched these courses, um, I am, you know that that's going to be an arena that I'm not going to take on to my plate. I'm going to train somebody else on my team to do that. So, but, uh, back to the forrester research quotes. So 49% of customers say that having their questions answered at the time of their online purchase is one of the most important features a website can offer. So when I say add that live chat, if you're doing a big launch or product launch or you have an online store, it's almost half of customers who want those questions answered and they want them answered right now before they click buy. So really look at those three options, um, for how you can add live chat or at least, I mean there would be four options if you're just adding in at least a chat Bot to answer a few questions, but you have to think through what those answers are ahead of time if you're going to do a chat bot. So once again, the, um, the tools that are available to do live chat, our live chat for wordpress zen desk as in like, you know, your Zen ohm, um, Z, e n d e, s, k, and then [inaudible], which is o, l. A. R. K. So moving right along to tip number five. So, tip number five is to really look at your website and see if you are creating a Siri worthy experience. And what that means is that, you know, voice search with Siri and Alexa and all these other different, um, artificial intelligent agents is really hot. I mean, how many times did you say, you know, such and such turn this on or I'm open the garage door or whatever it is. We are becoming a very automated world. And so what, what that means for your business and what you need to be looking at for your business, specifically your website is, is it Siri friendly? And the way to make it Siri friendly is, you know, if you've done a serious search, you know, um, the results are really short. So you need to be making sure that your content, number one has short, clear, concise, um, sentences that answer your customers and prospects most pressing questions. So if you're getting questions, you know, if you're at networking events or online or you're doing these polls with clients, um, or you're doing speaking engagements and you get the same questions over and over and over, make sure that you're answering those questions. You pose the question and the answer in your website content. And if you need a little bit more about how to clarify that and get really clear messaging either, um, go back and listen to the previous four, uh, episodes. So starting with episode number 40 through 43, um, no, 42 43 42, um, we're all about story branding and the power of story in Your Business and that will help you clarify that message, um, and clarify what you're saying. So adding the ability for Siri to filter through your content, um, and pick up, you know, you answered this question with this answer so that if there's a verbal search, um, she can pull that in and make you want of the results that is found. So, um, the other ways that Siri will find you things that you need to know about your website as you need it and make sure that it's loading quickly. And there are some tools that I can throw in here to let you test that there is Google page speed. I'm not truly in love with it to be quite honest and most web developers aren't because some of the things they ding you on are not even things you can control. Um, I use GT metrics, so g, t and then any t r l x and I will link to those in the show notes, but you can go and test your page speed there and it actually gives you multiple, um, testing sites and what your grade level is on those. And then if you have issues, you can take those to your website developer and have them fixed things that will slow down your website. Just so you know, is if you have, um, youtube videos embedded and you're not using a popup function, it will slow down your site. If you have, um, really large images, it will slow down your site. There's a whole, there's a whole list. Like I know I'm not gonna go into it too much in this episode, but um, it will give you recommendations. You can either hand those to your website developer or you can try and fix them yourselves. I would highly recommend if you don't know what you're doing, that you give them to your website developer and have them fix some for you. Um, you also need to make sure that you have an https for your, um, domain, which means you have an SSL secure socket layer, um, license installed on your website, meaning that you are keeping anyone's information that is coming to your website, that you're collecting safe, insecure, uh, for more on that. I believe I did an episode on that earlier in the podcast and I will link to that in the show notes as well. But that is an indicator for Google to either penalize or, um, promote your content, which means that if serious searching for it and you aren't meeting those, those two criteria as far as page speed and security, you're not even, you're going to be penalized. You're not going to show up in results, but you're also going to be penalized by Google. So be aware of what that looks like and um, do as much as you can with your website content to answer those questions so that you get as much, um, content traction as you can out of what you're putting out there. Um, tip number six, two m oh, and the whole reason I'm going to back up for just a second. The whole reason you want to make your, your website search friendly through Siri is that it makes it easy for your clients and prospects to find what they're looking for. A lot of times they may be in the car, especially if you're a restaurant. And for example, we have a lot of Mexican food in Colorado. And so if you had somebody that was looking for a specific Mexican food product, like maybe they wanted, um, chimichangas and you answered like, you know, we have the best chimichangas in Colorado because we put the Green Chili on the inside and the outside or whenever you know, whatever it is and they're doing, you know, in the car, your client or prospective customers driving down the street go and who has the best chimichangas in Denver, Colorado. You've answered that in your website content, not just in a menu, but in your website content. You're going to show up in that Siri search, meaning you pre thought about personalizing what your customers are going to ask for and then answering that so that you show up. So think about how you can do that in your content. It's not something that's going to happen overnight and it's not something that's going to be stagnant. It's something you're going to have to continue to stay up on as questions come up. And as you evolve and as your business evolves. So think about that because, um, voice search is huge and it's only gonna get bigger. So moving onto number six, um, when your interacting with clients, I have a lot of clients who, most of my clients are either my age or older than me, so you're, you're talking, you know, forties, 50s, 60s and they aren't necessarily really comfortable with just watching a video. They want to have personal interaction and I think that the more personalized we can make it, even if we're not in the same place, um, by using like video conferencing software and there's a ton of it out there. My favorite is zoom. Obviously if you haven't heard of zoom, um, you can just go to Zoom.us. It is free to use, they do have an upgraded plan, but you really don't need it unless you're doing um, really long conference calls with lots of people and even you do need it. It's, it's super reasonable. Like you're not, I don't think unless you're going to do huge webinars with thousands of people right away outside the gate, you're not going to need to pay for the premium or even the paid version. I got away with the um, the unpaid version for a really long time, so zoom is a great way to share screens so that if they're having problems with say, logging in or they're having problems with something you sent them, you can screen share or they can show you where they're at and you can direct them through that conference. The other nice thing is that zoom actually records your call and your video chat if you want it to. You can choose to do that. And then a lot of times I'll work with clients and we're doing consulting and they're like, hi, just, I'm not going to remember all this. I'm like, don't worry, I'm recording this. I'm going to download it and I will send you the link. And so they can go and rewatch the video or listen to the audio or both, um, for our call. And then, you know, if they get stuck along the way and before our next call, they know what to go listen to you and or where to go listen to it. And they can keep moving through the process. So think about how you can integrate things like zoom and Skype and all those different, um, technology options when you cannot be face to face with your clients. And then last but not least, um, a good CRM tool or customer management tool is your best friend. And I'm talking about one. Now, there's some really great ones out there and there's a bunch that are free and there's a bunch that will, that, you know, costs a little bit of money. Um, and then there's some that are super expensive. So, um, but the great thing about a customer management tool or a CRM tool is that it enables you to put perspective clients and current clients into a system that will alert you, um, when you need to reach back out to them or send them a thank you card or send them a birthday card. Um, we have a realtor that was actually, um, at one point worked with my uncle don. This has been years and years ago cause my uncle don has been, um, he passed away in 2004, so it's been a long time. But we, um, house hunted with his team. Oh my gosh, my kids, the twins were in car seats and they are now 15, so it's been 13 years. Um, my kids still get a birthday card from Joe to Beto every year and it's, you know, three birthday cards. They come every year and we have not bought a house from him. We have not, but you know, he's still top of mind because he has stayed in touch all this time or somebody on his team has stayed in touch all this time. And so the likelihood that we would use him when we move or when we sell our house is pretty high. One because he focuses on the aerobic area and two, because he has been sending those birthday cards and phone calls, um, for years. So or more. I mean it's been a long time. So when you have a powerful CRM like that, you are able to track, you know, what you have done with clients in the past or prospects, where you met them, how you know them, where they're at in the sales journey. Um, and there's a lot of different tools out there. So I'm going to give you a few, um, and some have more functionality than others and you're just really gonna need to take a look at your business and see which one is the best and which one you can grow with. So my all time favorite CRM that gives you tons and tons of flexibility. Um, and it's probably a little overwhelming actually, but um, it's also free is Insightly. And I used that for a long time to track my customer leads. Um, and I have since just recently moved to something else because I wanted a little bit more functionality and what I was doing with my leads. And so, um, my next recommendation is going to be a product called Dub Asado and it's D U B s a d o. And don't panic about writing all these down cause I'll put them in the show notes for you with links so you can get over there. And what's cool about Deb Sato is you can actually move a prospect right into, um, the next piece of your sales process. So you can have them fill out an online form on your website and it will send them into an email, um, series. And then from the email series, you can send them a proposal and from the proposal you can send them a contract and then a contract, um, that goes directly to an invoice or a way for them to pay you. And so what I like about that is that you only have to set that up once and then you add them, you know, they, they add themselves as a customer into the system. And as you know, you're ready to work with them and moving forward into what you want them to purchase. You give them the option to have all of that at their fingertips. So you have to think through what that process is for you. But, um, it's a little bit different than Insightly. You can put notes in there and you can put different pieces of information, but Insightly, um, has it has different functionalities. So I'm just going to recommend you guys go look at these and see which one is best for you. The other one that I really like, um, I like some things about it and I don't like other things about it. Um, hubspot has a free CRM, however, to use it with any other integrations. Like if you want to add your email service provider into it, um, you, you can't, it only works with their marketing platform and their marketing platform is super expensive. Like I think it starts at two or $300 a month. So if you're not there yet, which most of my listeners are not there yet, um, you probably want to look at something like Insightly or Dub Sato. Um, there's another one that's like, oh, I can't remember what it is. Zero Bs, I think it's called zero bs CRM. And then, um, there's salesforce, which is also a pretty big robust, um, CRM product. You're probably not going to really be ready for that. But if you are, if you're ready to move forward, salesforce is great. I used to use that in corporate and then infusion soft, which is kind of an all in one, but it is really like you're going to probably need a full time infusionsoft person if you're going to move in that direction. So that's what I would recommend is using a CRM of some sort to help you track where clients are to help you track, you know, what your communications have been with them. Now if you're using an email service provider and you're just communicating through like email series and things like that, you don't need to put them in a CRM and a lot of them will integrate back and forth. Um, but you have the ability to go look at the reports and your in your email service provider and it will tell you, you know, how many emails they've opened, how many they've clicked on. Um, if their, you know, they fallen off the wagon, maybe you want to send out a, a SOS email to them. Like, Hey, are you still out there? What can I help you with? Yada, Yada, Yada, that kind of thing. But those are just some tools I wanted to put out there. So just to recap today's episode on customer service. Um, I gave you seven different ways to stay in touch with your customers and that you can implement into your business. So we're going to go backwards. Number seven was to get some sort of CRM and enter in your customer information and your interaction so you can, um, put yourself a tickler and follow up with people either with a call or an email or whatever's next on the agenda. Um, number six is to use some sort of online, um, communication tool for like screenshotting or not screenshotting, but, um, yeah, screenshotting or, um, conference calling. So it's like live interaction. You're not doing a recording, but you're actually having a live conversation with them over zoom or Skype or something like that. And then giving them access to that recording if they need it. Um, so that they have it later. And the other side note on that is if you're giving them a recording, it also keeps you top of mind with them. So if you're doing a sales call and you're sharing a recording and you're going through, you know, the benefits of your product, they then had that recording and they're like, oh, that's awesome. I don't watch this again. And you know, it just puts plants at further and further the seed in their mind. Um, number five is to make sure that all of your contents on your website and other is I'm searchable by Siri. So go back and listen to what you need to do to make that happen. And number four is to add some sort of chat option to your website, whether that's live chat or a messenger chat. Um, number three is to make yourself available to your customers, um, and your prospects. And don't keep it a secret, like tell them where, when, how all that sort of stuff. Number two is to create personalized videos to increase engagement. And number one was to personalize all of your interactions, including email and above and beyond. So thanks so much for tuning in. I really appreciate you guys being here. I will be on next week and we are talking about, let me look really quick. Uh, we are talking about chat bots and customer service once again, so I'm going to dig a little deeper on chatbots and um, some of the powerful things you can do that are called growth tools. And I will um, fill you in on what's happening with messenger marketing and some things you need to look out for and some things that could work really great for you. So until next week, um, I hope you have a great week. And as always, if you have something that you'd like to share with me, comments, questions, or just to shout out, you can reach me on, um, Instagram via direct message at Alisa M. Connor, I'll see you soon. Have a great week. Take care.
